

Jon Warner, Ph.D.

Jon Warner, Ph.D., is an entrepreneurship expert, having founded and led three startups (with two successful exits), plus an international corporate world career with Air Products and Chemicals and Exxon-Mobil as Deputy CEO. Exiting the corporate world, Warner founded and developed The Worldwide Center for Organizational Development.

He was CEO of two startups, a digital publishing company, and a Bill-pay and payments software platform that operated in the US, UK, and Australia. Since his successful exit from the latter company, a focus has been to mentor and invest in disruptive startup companies, especially in technology deployment in digital health. Warner manages the deal flow into a Los Angeles based Healthcare Investment Fund, Adaptive Health Capital and he is the CEO of Silver Moonshots, a research organization and 'virtual incubator' for startups focused on health technology and innovation aimed at the 50+ population.

Warner graduated from the University of Warwick in the UK with a double bachelor's degree in philosophy and politics, after which he completed his MBA. He has a Ph.D. in Psychology. A prolific author of forty books, his latest SLAM is a question guide for entrepreneurs. Warner is on the Board of St. Barnabas, Los Angeles largest aging-in-place nonprofit, is the Los Angeles Ambassador for Aging 2.0, and is Co-chair of the annual 'Aging into the future' conference. Also, he is an Adjunct Professor at Redlands University teaching entrepreneurship.
